This was useful (477) FamilyCat Member Someone has a manual for this? Or will anyone tell me how to operate it? I never had a cyclocomputer before. When I entered the Echowell website, it did not contain information about my model. I inherited a bicycle with it. Replace the battery and only shows "0.0 km / h" and "SPD" does not want to show anything else. Thanks in anticipation cyclерuk veteran member can put a photo of it. Often computers are genetically and have similar operations. Ride with force or go home alone! FAMILYCAT MEMBER (01-18-2010, 03:08 PM) CYCLERUK WROTE: ä, you can put a photo of it. Often computers are and have similar operations. Sorry, no. Have the Must you be on the mountain in the handlebars before I can begin to change the settings? Thanks. Bill Hall of Famer Hehehe Bom Ole Sheldon's Site! This should help you to make sure you read the whole page to take advantage of the maximum... Good maintenance for your bike, can you do it as the wheels are true and smooth! Senior Cyclерuk member to change the settings you do not need to have the holder. But obviously you have to be in the starting line-up to work. If you check the front wheel, there should be a man attached to one (or two) of the rays. There must be a sensor in one of the legs of the fork that the mother has to pass. The sensor detects the passing hand and sends a signal to the computer. There must be a thin sensor wire for the support. (Unless it's a wireless?) Put the computer on and turn the wheel so it works. If it doesn't work, the sensor may be close enough as well. © My hand. Another test: If you look at the third part of the computer, there will be two metal contacts disengaged. Take a piece of metal wire (paper clip) and short the two contacts. Bolling the wire in both contacts should make the computer work if O.K. is working. You will need to go through a procedure to set the computer. Usually: - Set miles or miles. Wheel circumference assembly. Set time. Here is an Echowell instructional sheet which may be similar to yours: He mentions the clear key. There can be a reset button (small hole?) In the three-way part of the computer or you need to remove the battery and then insert yourself to cause a restart. I hope this helps. Walk hard or walk home alone! FamilyCat Member thanks Cyclерuk, it seems. I hope my print screen produces it so I can read it. (01-18-2010, 04:22 pm) Bill wrote: Hehehe Bom Ole Sheldon's Site! That should. to make sure you read the entire page to take advantage of the maximum....., Thanks Bill So I click on "Echo" so the closest model is Echo J-7, which mentions two buttons. I only have one. I wonder if there was a "cover" around the switch because now it's in a recess. Bill Hall of Famer Try Cyclers Link Above is a better link. Famous member, I received an e-mail from Echowell with two file attachments to adjust and calibrate. I'll send you an email to anyone who needs it. Time will not allow me to do, but now I realize that the button in the external mode is missing. I think it will work, even if it looks a little strange. Cheers FC Muirineach New Member I do not know if this consultation is still alive ... But I have a circa 1995 manual for a echo-j6. Let me know if you're still in the hunt and I'll scan and send an e-mail. Famous member Thank you Mirineach Welcome to the brotherum. Are they two sides of A4?
