It contains 1 logo placeholder. A short introduction to your technology videos and so much more. Impress your audience with this super cool looking and energetically animated AE template. Available in HD. No Plug-Ins From BMW to Nissan, via Kia, Roll-Royce and many more, 2020 has seen countless car manufacturers reveal new or updated logos. With car logos so instantly recognisable, creating a new one will always present a challenge to designers - but one new iteration has managed to leave us seriously underwhelmed. Fiat Chrysler's merger with PSA this year means that 14 different car brands, including Peugeot, Vauxhall, Alfa Romeo and Fiat, are now all owned by a single company: Stellantis. Surely a supergroup of 14 famous car brands deserves one of the best logos ever? Alas, it seems it wasn't to be. Some of the iconic car brand logos under the Stellantis umbrella (Image credit: Stellantis)Now, we wouldn't for a moment expect the design team to attempt to incorporate 14 logos into one (not even the best logos with hidden messages contain that many Easter eggs), but with such a plethora of iconic car brands under its (seat)belt, we'd have hoped the Stellantis logo would be somewhat exciting - or, at the very least, vehicular. But the new company's logo (below) is anything but. Does this scream 'car brand' to you? (Image credit: Stellantis)While Stellantis says in a press release (opens in new tab) that the new logo symbolises the "rich heritage" and "combined strengths" of the new group's 14 brands, we're struggling to find a hint of heritage - or even strength - in the new design. Sure, the 'A' has had its crossbar removed, and there are a few decorative dots present (not 14, though - missing a trick there), but otherwise it's just a sans-serif typeface on a plain background. If you told us this was a financial services logo, we'd believe you. And it seems we're not the only ones who don't feel like we're looking at a car logo. Users have taken to Twitter (below) to liken Stellantis to everything from a pharmaceutical company to a spaceship. This feels like the evil corporation in any number of sci-fi films. 9, 2020See moreWell 1 for one am very excited to see the first feature length animation from Stellantis Studios. 9, 2020See moreWhen can I hop aboard Starship Stellantis?November 9, 2020See moreLooking like the conclusion of a commercial for some resort in the Bahamas. This will definitely help sell more cars. 9, 2020See moreI dunno, with that logo I'm leaning towards 'utopian sea or space habitation that's going to wind up full of flickering lights and mysterious blood smears in a few months'November 9, 2020See morePerhaps it's a little unfair to compare Stellantis's logo with those of the car logos under its umbrella. Unlike those, the parent company's design is unlikely ever to grace a car bonnet - we won't be seeing a Stellantis Corsa any time soon. That said, we'd have much preferred to see something a little more inspired, like BMW's brilliant new take on its famous logo, or even Kia's sleek new look. If Stellantis does decide to rebrand any time soon, the designers would do well to check out our guide to finding logo inspiration.
