Are you ready to elevate your social media game to the next level? Cause Lizzo Cuz I Love The album is here and is legitimately perfect for your Instagram captions. The new album fell on Friday and Cuz I Love by Lizzo The lyrics are full of powers of bad taste buds that feel made to measure to accompany your next selfie. And even if you don't use these texts on your social media, they can act as your personal mantras. Because we should all channel Lizzo and leave Cuz I Love You remember why you love you. Music can inspire us and there is no more than rapper, flute player, singer, actor, writer Lizzo. Of course, he could be the only rapper/flautista you know. But despite his unique abilities, you will find an eye-catching spirit in Lizzo as his texts are super reliable and cut right to the core. So, while you may not always feel as self-insured as she — as when she rocked stage at Coachella — her music will still provide you with the confidence boost that everyone needs now and then. Just 33 minutes, listening to the 11-track Cuz I Love You could easily become part of your morning routine. I'm sorry, I'm not sure. So while dancing along the Cuz I Love You by Lizzo, don't forget to listen to the lyrics. Because one of them could become your signature. Although the Beatles officially separated in 1970, the band had moved away from the tour several years earlier. In fact, the last show that the band played for paying customers came to San Francisco Candlestick Park on August 29, 1966. If you look at the Fab Four route in Candlestick that summer, you will see why the band needs a break. That July, as he was leaving the Philippines,He had been unknown and pushed about. (It was worse for their crew.) When they arrived in America in August, things have only slightly improved. Since then, John Lennon comments that the band is â € â € â € œThe popular of Jesúsâ € brought out more boycotts, along with the threats of Ku Klux Klan. In short, tourism had become little worth the money. But he didn't stop at these accidents. From the first days of Beatlemania, the group had difficulty taking their live performances seriously with thousands of screaming girls unable to hear what they were playing. And soon they began to replace the obscene texts to their Raucoues concerts. John Lennon said the Beatles concerts had nothing to do with music the Beatles perform in the Deauville Hotel, Miami Beach, 16 February 1964. | CBS Via Getty Images When the Beatles played at 56,000 people at the New York Shea Stadium in 1965, the group inaugurated a new Rock Stadium era. At that point, the bands could not command those types of crowds, and the sound problems became obvious immediately. In anthology, Paul McCartney noted that his future Linda wife was in Shea in 1965. â € œIt was very pissed with everyone who shouts,"Paul said. He really wanted to hear the show. This was not the problem, though. Not then. "Paul's classmates also recognized that you could hear. The following year, Ringo had seen the end of the line. â € No one was listening to the shows, he said in anthology. He was ok at the beginning, but he got that we were really playing badly. John said he would have lost his voice at times and no one would notice. â € œThe music had not been heardâ € , John remembered in anthology. â € œThere only a kind of show show. [...] The music had nothing to do with it .â € However, the band found the way to deal with the cry at the beginning of Beatlemania. Singing vulgar replacement texts was one of them. The Beatles sang of sexual organs when they knew no one could hear the Beatles exhibit on the stage at the Washington Coliseum, Washington DC, February 1964. | Rowland Scherman / Getty Images If you play an audience of teenage girls screaming at the top of their lungs, it becomes clear immediately that your writing and music are not appreciated. So how did the Beatles did? Moreover, they tried to have fun. On the Shea Stadium show, you can see John who does his best impression of Jerry Lee Lewis making his elbow through a keyboard. And you will often see John and Paul joke with George Harrison during the shows of the time. But the Beatles vocalists have also had fun injecting dirty texts in their performances. In The Ox, Biography of the Bassist John Entwistle of 2020, Paul Rees includes an extract from the unpublished biography of Entwistle written on a 1964 the Who spectacle played with The Beatles. The Fab Four backstage, Entwistle and his bandmates realized that the mop tops did not sing their famous famous â € "(The members of the WHO) were crying from laughter to the words they were singing, â € " Entwistle wrote. â € "It was a hard day of duration, â € â € Entwistle remembered the Beatles Clear-Tagliente singing over the direct voice feed that will go backstage. (The screaming girls had no way to hear it.) And the entwistle took a reworking of another Beatles Classic later in the set. â € "I want to keep your c * nt, â € " heard them sing.
