These tales inspired the finished series, though it was not ultimately a dedicated retelling.[9] She began writing A Court of Thorns and Roses in early 2009, with the first draft taking about five weeks to complete.[10] A Court of Mist and Fury's first draft was written entirely in a split point of view between Feyre and Rhys.[11] The second books went through multiple name changes, including A Court of Wind and Stone, A Court of Calm and Fury, A Court of Stars and Smoke, A Court of Wings and Stars, A Court of Venom and Silver and A Court of Stars and Frost.[12]

Like the first novel, the second is based around multiple fairy tales and myths, including Hades and Persephone, where the Greek mythology inspired characters such as Rhysand and Feyre and their home in the Night Court.[13] Other fairy tale inspirations include the Weaver,[12] and the Book of Exodus, which loosely inspired parts of the backstory for Miryam and Drakon.[11] The final cover of A Court of Wings and Ruin was designed by Adrian Dadich, with the dress pictured on the cover originally designed by Charlie Bowater, and later adapted by Dadich.[14] On July 12, 2016, Entertainment Weekly reported that Maas was writing five new books for the series, which would include two novellas and three further novels which would be set before and after the first trilogy.[15][16] In 2020, the series was reprinted and published by Bloomsbury with new illustrated covers.[17] A Court of Thorns and Roses has existed in the gray area between Young Adult and New Adult fiction since the publication of the first book.[18] At the time A Court of Thorns and Roses was published, the New Adult categorization hadn't caught on the way publishers hoped it would. ^ a b "A Court of Mist and Fury is on sale TODAY ".
