While details of the deal are not yet finalized, it was previously reported that the acquisition was intended to strengthen the company's position in the car-sharing market. Avis Budget Group has faced criticism from customers, with some experiencing difficulties with their rental experiences. One customer, Sarahno, shared a negative review on May 29, 2013, stating that they had a poor experience with the company's customer service, including being charged incorrectly and not having issues resolved promptly. Despite efforts to resolve the issues through various channels, including email and phone calls, Sarahno ultimately decided to take their complaints to the Better Business Bureau. I'm still being charged extra days even though I cleaned up most of the dirt on the carpet (I've got pics). The third issue is that Budget just deducted $70.52 from my card again today, and it's been five days since we returned the rental, but nobody - not Aman from Budget or anyone at corporate - knows why. They keep transferring me to different people who can't help, and I'm really frustrated because this company has wasted so much of my time. As a last resort, I'll be taking them to the BBB. (By Chris) We used Priceline to book a car, but when we got to Orlando, Sikandar at the airport didn't clearly explain the contract or tell us about the extra fees for insurance and GPS. He mumbled with a heavy accent, and my husband and I had to ask him to repeat himself multiple times because we couldn't understand what he was saying. In the end, they charged us an extra $730 on top of what we paid Priceline, which was already booked and non-refundable. We were really looking forward to this trip, but then got hit with a bill we couldn't afford. When I talked to the company, all they kept saying was that we should have read the contract more carefully. But it's not just about us - good customer service means training staff to clearly explain things to customers and not taking advantage of them. The supervisor at Budget even said they're not accountable for their staff's actions, which is ridiculous. We feel like we've been taken advantage of and will never rent from this company again.
