If you want to play a practical joke, you don't have to head out to buy props or plan an elaborate scheme in a fixed location. You don't have to wait until April's Fools to prank your friends, either. All you need to do is download a prank app on your iPhone. Let's check out some hilarious iPhone apps you can use to prank your friends.

1. PrankDial

PrankDial provides different types of pre-recorded prank calls, like a tough guy demanding why you called his girlfriend or a food delivery driver requesting payment for a non-existent order. For some calls, you can customize them slightly to make them sound even more convincing for your prank victim. Download: PrankDial (Free, in-app purchases available) Lie Detector Truth Test scans your fingerprints to determine whether you're lying or telling the truth. As it scans, there's even a subtle pulsing on the screen, as though the app is genuinely scanning your heart rate. The trick to pranking your friends is manipulating the "Truth" or "Lie" result with the large Start button. Tapping on the middle of the button gives you random results. Tapping on the left side gives "Truth" while the right side gives "False." Knowing this you can trick your friends into thinking it really works. Download: Lie Detector Truth Test (Free, premium version available) Crack & Break It! is described as a stress reliever app. However, there's one handy feature that you can use to prank your friends. Use the image breaker to create a fake cracked screen. Take a screenshot of your Lock or Home Screen and "break" the image. You can also use an all-black image to create the look of a damaged iPhone. Later, if your friend happens to use your phone, or you have access to theirs they'll think the screen is actually cracked. Download: Crack & Break It! (Free, premium version available) Use Famous Voice Changer to record your voice as a famous cartoon character, entertainer, or other public figure. The voices are quite accurate, but you do need to try and imitate the speaking mannerisms of the individual. Otherwise, the result sounds like they've lost their accent and are speaking stiffly. Then, send the fake recording to your friend and watch their reactions! For this app, the voice recording doesn't necessarily have to be a prank, it could be a fun gift as well, depending on what you'd like to say. Download: Famous Voice Changer (Free, in-app purchases available) The Prank App has a library of mini pranks. One despicable prank that almost always works is the unexpected scary image. In one version of this, the image is hidden in the form of an egg in a beautiful forest. In another, a mini-game instructs the player to let a ball fall carefully from one pipe to another. Challenge your friend to beat your "high score"—because the third pipe has something sinister waiting. Careful not to frighten yourself while you're testing these pranks! The Prank App also has a list of party games such as Truth or Dare and Never Have I Ever. Besides the pranks, these additional features are sure to add fun to friendly gatherings. Download: The Prank App (Free, premium version available) Air Horn Multi provides a selection of everyday sounds. There are loud, alerting sounds like air horns and fire alarms. But there are also innocent ones that you can use to your advantage. Want a persistent door knocking? Activate it discreetly while you're both enjoying horror movies after midnight. There are annoying sounds as well. When your friend finally falls asleep, place your phone next to their ear and press your finger onto the mosquito icon. Stop when they stir, then do it again when they think the insect has flown away. Download: Air Horn Multi (Free) Fake All lets you create fake calls, messages, and chat notifications. Schedule incoming calls and notifications from contacts you've created. You can set the caller's name, content, and time of the expected communication. To make the prank seem even more real, Fake All also lets you set custom backgrounds to match your current one. Fake All is a useful app to help you escape awkward situations as well. Download: Fake All (Free) Fake Posts Creator lets you create fake Facebook posts, complete with the social media platform's familiar design. Customize post content such as images, likes, comments, reactions, and dates. Create a fake viral post where a celebrity commented on it, announce that you've won a giveaway, pretend it's the college's official page intending to expel your friend—anything outrageous goes! You don't need to log in to your Facebook account or link the app to it to create these fake posts, so don't worry that you'll accidentally post them on your actual social media. Download: Fake Posts Creator (Free, in-app purchases available) Use Fake Profile Generator to create a fake dating profile. Pretend you're matched with your crush or, better yet, create a profile for your friend and celebrate their match with the person you always teased them with. You'll need believable photos for the profile pictures, but with everyone posting selfies on social media, it's certainly an easy prank to carry out in a small friendship group. Download: Fake Profile Generator (Free, premium version available) Fart cushions have been around for a long time, but now you can get a smartphone version. Pressing on different parts of the fart cushion triggers a different sound. You can set a timer for the noise to go off at a specific time or set the sensitivity to the maximum so every slight pressure triggers the sound while your phone is hidden behind or under a cushion. Gross? Certainly. But it remains a timeless prank. Download: Fart Cushion (Free) Use these prank apps to mess with your friends. Just a reminder to keep safety in mind. For example, it wouldn't be advisable to start playing the fire alarm loudly in public. Also, make sure you know your friend's boundaries and don't go overboard with the joke. At the end of the day, pranks should be fun for both parties. For other tech-related pranks, you don't even need apps to carry them out. You just need to be familiar with common iPhone features and settings because there are offline ways to prank your friends. Let's face it—whoopee cushions pop and no one has ever believed their refrigerator could get up and run. It's 2024 and your prank apps need to catch up with the times. As always, your phone, and friendly neighborhood mobile app developers are here to help you out. Here are the best prank apps that help you pull off some great stunts. PrankDial Listen in on phony phone calls with your friends Prank phone calls! They apparently never get old as there are oodles of prank phone call apps across the App Store. Our app of choice though for phony phone calls is Prank Dial. The app is pre-populated with hundreds of prank calls for you to choose from and the app takes care of all the hard work for you. Just choose a prank for the available options, enter in a little information, and hit go! The app will call them and it sounds just like a real voice. It listens for them to talk and can interpret when it needs to respond with the next prompt on the script. All users get three free calls each day though if you'd like to go all Crank Yankers yourself, you can pony up for extra credits. The app itself looks great and modern unlike many prank apps that haven't been updated in years. It has regularly received new features including news calls and a call log to save all your previous prank calls. When it comes to prank phone calls, this is our go-to. Fart Sounds & Annoying Noises Fart jokes, but modernized Let's face it. For better or worse, I can't rightly sit here and compile a list of so-called prank apps and not include at least one that made fart noises. It just had to be done! So without further ado... let one rip for the aptly-named Fart Sounds & Annoying Noises app. This app is basically just a soundboard that is comprised of farts and other annoying sound effects. They're all... uh... interestingly named. Fart noises such as "Grandma's Casserole," "Three Too Many Corn Dogs," and "Loud and Proud." Just tap and play them any time you'd like! As a modern take on the classic prank soundboard, there are many other ways to invoke these sounds. You can tap on them and let them fly, or you could try something more detailed. Perhaps motion detection. Once you choose your sound, the app can use the accelerometer in your phone to detect when someone moves it. When they do, it will play your chosen audio. Another option is a countdown. Select your annoying noise, choose how long you want to delay the trigger, place your phone near a friend, and walk away. 30 seconds later and that fart will go off and you were nowhere near. My favorite though is using Apple Watch. You can place your phone in perfect position, walk away, then when the time is right, trigger the sound from your Apple Watch. It is the best way to nail the timing while maintaining plausible deniability. For the most full-featured and modernized soundboard of farts, check out Fart Sounds & Annoying Noises. The Prank App Tons of pranks, one app The Prank App is an all-in-one solution for your pranking needs. Not everything here is a winner, but there are more than 10 pranks built in with more available through the shop. You've got apps that force decisions, noise making ones like razors and whips, and scary ones to freak people out. All in one app. Sound noises are pretty common, but are widely used. These can be ones that replicate common annoying noises such as an air horn, an electric razor, or a police siren. Time it right, you can absolutely trick someone into thinking you shaved their head or the po-po is on their tail. There are others like the lie detector. Just have them place their finger on the screen and it can "discern" whether or not they're lying. Of course, it can't actually do that and you control the results the whole time! You can also predict what number will show on a set of dice. Regardless of if you use one or several, this is an easy starting place for prank apps. Crack & Break It! Did you just break the window? Crack & Break It is another soundboard-style app built around different sounds of glass shattering. Choose from fluorescent tubes, glass blocks, light bulbs, bottles, balloons, and much more. You are presented with a skeuomorphic interface with a bery of your chosen object to destroy. Tap any to shatter or break them with realistic audio. If you're on the phone, just load this up on your iPad and tap to prank your friend on the phone to make them think you just broke a window or dropped your drink. Or do so from the adjoining room. Instead of using this as a prank app, it can also be a de-stressing app. Just like popping bubble wrap in the real world, this can provide the satisfying release of shattering bottles or throwing light bulbs to the ground. Who's Calling Fake Caller Receive calls from anyone, anytime Have you ever wanted to get a phone call from the president? Or maybe your favorite celebrity? Well... I hate to burst your bubble but it probably won't happen. The next best thing however is convincing your friends that it happened. The fairly terribly named Who's Calling Fake Caller Prank Phone Call app can help you do just that. With this app, you can get out of a meeting, escape an awful date, or convince your family that George Clooney has you on speed dial. There are preset options but it is just as easy to add your own calls — complete with photo. When the call comes in, the caller will even talk to you, adding further credibility to the call. The app has 99 different ring tones as well as 9 different stylized call screens. You can choose your preferred delay so that you can sit your phone down and not touch it when your famous friend calls in. This app is so easy to use with so many possibilities from harmless pranks to avoiding awkward social interactions. Fake All Create fake messages for WhatsApp or Messenger Phony phone calls are still funny, but these days more folks are texting and messaging rather than making phone calls. Fake All can still pull off a fake phone call that looks almost dead-onto the real iOS call screen, but I love this app for its ability to recreate text conversations that look just like Facebook Messenger or WhatsApp — two of the most popular chat tools. With Fake All, you can create an entirely fictional conversation. Jump back and forth between the two parties to write an entire conversation of your liking that you can show off and pass for the real thing. You can adjust backgrounds and other aspects to look just like the legit apps. Other than creating the conversations, you can have messages come in. Write the contents of the message and schedule it for a specific date or time. Then you'll get an alert that has the correct icon matching Apple's iMessage app, Facebook Messenger, Instagram, and more. Then you can exit that awkward conversation or easily impress your friends. Voice Changer Alter your voice for free! This simple, free voice changer app allows anyone to modify their voice. Using the app's built-in recorder, users can record themselves saying anything then apply any of the many filters to modify it. With this app, there are options to make your voice sound more masculine, more feminine, like a robot, higher, lower, faster, slower, and more. There isn't a lot else to this app but it does make everything easy to use. Apple's Share Sheet is built-in which makes it easy to share to other services like an iMessage or an email. Recordings are all saved in the app so you can revisit and access them at any time. Crickets. Did you hear that cricket?? Where is it! Ok... hear me out. This is an absurdly simple app but it is hilarious and a bit evil. Have you ever had a cricket in your home and it just kept chirping but you couldn't find it? That is what this app does with your Apple Watch. This single-task app will randomly play a cricket sound, annoying anyone nearby. It uses the watch's built-in speakers to send out a chirp, tricking people nearby into thinking a cricket has made its way inside. Chirps can be sent automatically at random, but it also supports complications. Just add the Crickets, please complication to the watch face and tap. No one will suspect it is you and since this is on Apple Watch, it is even more tricky since people don't realize that Apple Watch can do such things. But enough about other people's apps. LET'S TALK ABOUT YOURS I used to think this was a 5 plus star, but after they have removed a lot of the good pranks and now made it so that you can't choose whatever number you want it to say is calling, it's not as fun anymore. :-| still a good app just don't be better before they removed some of the best pranks, and definitely once you stopped being able to make it say any number to keep yourself anonymous. This simple code removes your caller ID from the other person's phone as you make your call—plus, it's totally free, and it works with most phone numbers.[1] Example: If the person's phone number is 123-555-6789, you'd type *671235556789 into your phone. Advertisement 3 Download a "burner" app or service that gives you a fake phone number. These apps download directly to your phone, so you can make a call without exposing your phone number in the process. Some apps are free, while others offer a free trial.[2] Google Voice (free) Burner (free trial) Hushed (free trial) 4 Use a spoofing app to disguise your caller ID. Spoofing services change the way your caller ID looks on someone else's phone without requiring you to get an actual burner phone. SpoofCard offers free and simple spoofing services that keep you anonymous while you pull the perfect prank.[3] 5 Make your prank call with a friend's phone. Let your friend know what you're up to and see if they're interested in doing you a solid. Just keep in mind that borrowing a friend's phone comes with a higher risk, since they'll be on the hook for any unhappy prank call victims.[4] You can always steal your friend's phone when they aren't looking—just be ready to deal with the consequences! 6 Dial from a pay phone. Pay phones aren't totally anonymous, but they still make you harder to pin down. Look for a payphone in town and prepare to make your call—the recipient can trace back the payphone number, but they won't be able to know who was using it.[5] 7 Buy a prepaid cellphone. Prepaid cell phones, also known as burners, are sold at most gas stations—best of all, you don't need to provide any personal info to use them. They are equipped with GPS, though, so you can be traced if you're using one at home.[6] Burner phones aren't super expensive, but they can add up over time. If you're a prankster, they aren't an ideal solution. Advertisement 1 Plan and practice your rise ahead of time. Write down the basics of what you want to say so you can sound super confident and convincing, since any stuttering and stammering will make it really obvious that the call is a prank. If you're running low on inspiration, try one of these ideas:[7] Craigslist Prank: Either place a joke ad on Craigslist or prank call someone who includes their phone number on an ad. 3-Way Calls: Set up a 3-way call with 2 random numbers and stay silent on your end of the line. The other callers will be super confused about how the call got set up. SFX: Pull up a silly soundboard and play funny SFX and voice lines into your phone when the other person picks up. 2 Keep the prank call short. Try to cap off your joke or ruse so it doesn't go on for more than a few minutes. Silly, short pranks are pretty harmless, but most people don't have the time or patience to put up with really long phone calls.[8] 3 Stifle your laughter in to make the call more convincing. Yes, your prank is totally hilarious—but bursting into giggles at the get-go kills your shot at landing the punchline. If possible, toggle the mute button on your phone to keep any stray snickers from sneaking through.[9] Try to get your laughs out of your system before you dial any numbers. 4 Deliver the prank as playfully as possible. You're calling someone as a way to kill time and have a laugh, so just relax and have fun with it! The more serious you are, the less enjoyable your prank call will be.[10] Some people might interpret a serious tone of voice as a threat, even if you're just pulling a prank. Keeping your voice light, silly, and fun helps prevent any miscommunication. Advertisement 1 Call actual people, not emergency services. Prank calling 911, the fire department, or local police is never a good idea and can get you into some serious trouble.[11] Instead, focus your pranks on specific people or businesses so you don't get in the way of actual emergencies. Don't prank emergency hotlines, either. Calling a hotline when you're not in a crisis causes major stress and frustration for volunteers trying to help legitimate callers. 2 Prank-call someone who lives pretty far away from you. Let's say you prank someone a few neighborhoods away. The person gets upset and calls the police, who easily trace your number in the area and track you down. That's no good! The further you are from the prank-called person, the less effort the police will put in to track you down.[12] 3 Avoid police impersonations to stay out of legal trouble. Your chances of getting traced increase a lot if you impersonate law enforcement, and you can get in big trouble for doing it. It just takes one call to the actual police station or law enforcement agency to get caught. 4 Keep the prank call light-hearted and silly, so that nobody feels frightened or offended. The longer you stay on the call, the more likely it is that you'll get caught, so keep it short. Plan out what you want to say ahead of time, and try to keep your call to 5 minutes or less. For tips on how to make prank calls over the internet, keep reading! Print involved pretty quickly.[14] Instead, play it safe by keeping your pranks silly and harmless. Never report a fake crime or emergency at someone else's home. This is known as "swatting," and can get you arrested or even thrown in jail.[15] Don't ask for people's personal information (like their credit card info), even as a joke. People might assume that you're trying to scam them and get the police involved. 5 Call a number just once instead of dialing it over and over again. If the person picks up, great! If they don't, move on to another number. Repeated phone calls qualify as harassment, which can get you in trouble with the local police. You definitely don't want that!.[16] 6 Turn off any recording software if it's illegal in your state. In California, Connecticut, Illinois, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Montana, New Hampshire, Nevada, Pennsylvania, and Washington, recording a phone call without the other person's permission is illegal. If you live in these states, make sure to switch off any recording devices before placing your call.[17] If you do record your prank call, don't post it on social media or send it on blast to a bunch of people. This qualifies as an "invasion of privacy," and you could be sued in civil court.[18] Advertisement Add New Question Question How do I prank call someone I know that has my phone number in their phone? Use a specialty prank-calling app! These apps can deliver a pre-recorded prank call to your friend while spoofing/hiding your number on caller ID. You can also type *67 before their number, which blocks prevents your caller ID from showing up. Question If I prank-called a restaurant and blew an air horn down the phone and then a fart noise would that be harmless? That's not a great idea. While the prank itself is harmless, that type of call is rude and disruptive to the person answering the phone. Depending on their mood, they might report the call to the local police. Question Can I get caught using a fake phone number that looks like someone else's? Yes, you can. Spoofed phone numbers can still be traced, but it takes a lot longer. Depending on the situation, the cops might not feel like going to the trouble of tracing and tracking you down—but don't bank on this if you're planning on prank-calling someone! If you have a helpful tip you'd like to share on wikiHow, please submit it in the field below. When dialing someone you know, do a voice so they won't know it's you. Make it convincing enough—if it sounds too cartoony, they'll be suspicious. The time you place a call makes a difference. For instance, calling at 2 PM is very different from calling at 2 AM. Pick random numbers out of the phone book. You'd be surprised at how much is in there for you. Try to do a random voice like Mickey Mouse or something else that's random and funny.
