Description: Encode a set of form elements as an array of names and values. This method does not accept any arguments. The .serializeArray() method creates a JavaScript array of objects, ready to be encoded as a JSON string. It operates on a jQuery collection of forms and/or form controls. The controls can be of several types: 4 5 6 7 The .serializeArray() method uses the standard W3C rules for successful controls to determine which elements it should include; in particular the element cannot be disabled and must contain a name attribute. No submit button value is serialized since the form was not submitted using a button. Data from file select elements is not serialized. Elements that do not contain a value attribute are represented with the empty string value. This method can act on a jQuery object that has selected individual form controls, such as , and . However, it is typically easier to select the element itself for serialization: $("form").submit(function(event) { console.log($(this).serializeArray()); This produces the following data structure (provided that the browser supports console.log): Get the values from a form, iterate through them, and append them to a results display. serializeArray demo $('#button').click(function() { var data = $('form').serialize(); $('#value').text(data); }); In another way, jQuery serializeArray() method also creates an array of objects from field values. This is similar to serialize() method except it creates array of object instead of query string. This method is useful in sending Ajax request where json format data is required. Syntax: $(selector).serializeArray(); You can find the below example of use of serializeArray() method. Submit $(document).ready(function() { $("form").on("submit", function(event) { event.preventDefault(); var formValues = $(this).serialize(); var actionUri = $(this).attr("action"); $.post(actionUri, formValues, function(data) { $("#result").html(data); }); }); }); Name of Student: Gender of Student: Male Female Hobbies of Student: Reading Playing Dance Favorite Color of student: Pink Yellow Red Comment: JQuery ajax form examples Below is the example of JQuery ajax form as follows.
