Il convainc ensuite dans les drames Message from the King et Marshall, tous deux sortis en 2017.Il rejoint l'univers cinmatographique Marvel pour prter ses traits au personnage de T'Challa. Il endosse le costume pour la premire fois dans le blockbuster succs Captain America: Civil War (2016) d'Anthony et Joe Russo, avant un film solo, Black Panther, rel plbiscite critique et public, suivi d'Avengers: Endgame sorti en 2019. Il lutte durant quatre annes contre le cancer du clon qui l'emporte 43 ans, continuant tourner ses derniers rles sans rvler sa maladie. Fils de Leroy, un travailleur d'une usine de textile ayant une affaire de tapisserie d'ameublement, et de Carolyn, une infirmire[1], Chadwick Aaron Boseman est n en Caroline du Sud et a grandi dans la ville d'Anderson. Il est le plus jeune d'une fratrie de trois enfants[1].En 1995, il obtient son diplme de fin d'tudes l'cole secondaire T.L. Hanna et, en 2000, il obtient un Bachelor en beaux-arts l'universit Howard Washington. Il est galement diplm de la British American Drama Academy Oxford. Son programme Oxford lui est financ par l'acteur amricain Denzel Washington par l'intermdiaire de l'actrice Phylicia Rashd, professeur de Boseman Howard[2],[3].Ayant pour objectif d'crire et diriger, il commence d'abord par tudier le thtre pour apprendre et comprendre et comprendre le mtier d'acteur. Par la suite, il obtient son diplme la Digital Film Academy de New York. Il est galement instructeur au thtre du Schomburg Junior Scholars Program[rf.souhaite].Au milieu des annes 2000, Chadwick Boseman parvient se faire un nom, devenant une des valeurs montantes du petit cran grce des ries policieres comme New York, police judiciaire, Les Experts: Manhattan[4]. En 2008, il s'installe Los Angeles pour poursuivre et enrichir sa carrire d'acteur. Il ralise, cette anne-l, son premier court mtrage, Blood Over a Broken Pawn, dans lequel il enfile aussi la casquette de scnariste et producteur et qui lui permet de remporter le prix du meilleur court-mtrage lors du festival du film noir d'Hollywood[5]. Il dcroche ainsi son premier rle rcurrent, entre 2008 et 2009, pour la srie tlvise dramatique et familiale Retour Lincoln Heights, intervenant dans quelques pisodes de la troisime et quatrime saison[6].Entre-temps, il continue d'apparatre rgulirement, sur le petit cran, dans des sries tels qu'Urgences, Lie to Me et Cold Case: Affaires classes. Il tourne aussi son premier long mtrage pour le film biographique dramatique et sportif, bien reu par la critique, The Express de Gary Fleder, mais n'a qu'un petit rle[7]. En 2010, il joue dans l'phmre srie dramatique Persons Unknown, faisant partie de la distribution principale aux cts de Jason Wiles, Daisy Betts et Lola Glaudini, mais ce show mystrieux dure seulement une saison, constitue de treize pisodes. Il s'ensuit de nombreuses interventions sur le petit cran (The Glades, Castle, Detroit 1-8-7, Justified, Fringe) qui lui permettent de se faire remarquer et enfin, de dcrocher des rles plus importants au cinma.La distribution principale du film Get on Up au Festival du cinma amricain de Deauville en 2014. En 2012, Chadwick Boseman est ainsi l'un des premiers rles du film d'action indpendant, The Kill Hole, aux cts de Tory Kittles, Peter Greene et Billy Zane mais le projet est trs mal accueilli par la critique[8]. La mme anne, il ralise et produit son second court mtrage, Heaven. Ce sont ses rles dans les longs mtrages biographiques 42 en 2013 et Get on Up en 2014 qui le propulsent en tant qu'acteur. Dans le premier, il interprte le premier joueur de baseball afro-amricain avoir volu en ligue majeure, Jackie Robinson et dans le second, il incarne le pape du funk, James Brown. Chadwick Boseman lors d'une avant-premire de Gods of Egypt d'Alex Proyas. Il y incarne la divinit gyptienne Thot, aux cts de Gerard Butler, Nikolaj Coster-Waldau, l'australien qui monte Brenton Thwaites et la franaise lodie Yung, cependant, ce long mtrage est un chec critique et commercial[9],[10]. Chadwick Boseman lors de l'dition 2016 du Comic-Con San Diego. De plus en plus sollicit, la carrire de l'acteur prend un tournant important lorsqu'il est choisi pour se glisser dans la peau d'un super-hros Marvel, T'Challa / Black Panther, dans Captain America: Civil War. Le film est un succs critique et public qui le propulse au rang de star[4].L'anne d'aprs, il confirme et sduit gree deux productions: il porte le thriller Message from the King du belge Fabrice Du Welz et convainc, galement et nouveau, dans le registre du film biographique pour le drame Marshall, dans lequel il incarne le juriste Thurgood Marshall.Fort de ce succs, en 2018, Chadwick Boseman endosse nouveau le costume de la Panthre noire, cette fois-ci pour son propre film de super-hros, Black Panther, premier film des studios Marvel avec un super hros monarque d'une nation africaine moderne et futuriste, le Wakanda. Cette super production reoit un accueil critique dithyrambique en Amrique du Nord et rencontre un succs considrable au box office. Ce rle lui vaut notamment le MTV Movie & TV Awards du meilleur hros et de la meilleur hros et de War qui sort aussi en 2018. La mme anne, il rejoint le casting de 21 Bridges, un polar commercialis sous le titre Manhattan Lockdown en France, produit par les ralisateurs de Avengers: Infinity War dans lequel il occupe le premier rle aux cts de Sienna Miller[11]. Cette production est globalement accueillie positivement par la critique[12]. Il reprend une nouvelle et dernire fois le rle de Black Panther en 2021, en pratiquant le doublage pour une srie d'animation, What If...? aux cts de Natalie Portman et Hayley Atwell[13].Lors de la 25e crmonie des Screen Actors Guild Awards en 2019, l'ensemble du casting principal de Black Panther est rcompens par l'Actor de la meilleure distribution. La mme anne, lors de la 50e crmonie des NAACP Image Awards, l'acteur est en lice pour le prix du meilleur acteur et s'incline face Beyonc, LeBron James, Regina King et Ryan Coogler[14]. Il remporte celui du meilleur acteur et s'incline face Beyonc, LeBron James, Regina King et Ryan Coogler[14]. aux cts de Viola Davis, en vedette du film Le Blues de Ma Rainey sorti en 2020, une ralisation de George C. Wolfe pour la plateforme Netflix[16]. Son interprtation du musicien Levee Green est largement salue et il est rcompens et nomm titre posthume dans plusieurs crmonies en 2021. Il obtient notamment le Golden Globe du meilleur acteur dans un film dramatique lors de la 78e crmonie, et le Screen Actors Guild Award du meilleur acteur lors de la 27e crmonie. Pour ce rle, il est galement nomm l'Oscar du meilleur acteur lors de la 93e crmonie. Sa mmoire est clbre lors de cette crmonie mais il ne remporte pas la rcompense, ce qui cre une petite polmique car le show a t construit sur la clbration de l'acteur. Nanmoins, sa famille dclare ne pas se sentir snobe[17]. En 2016, un cancer du clon de stade 3 lui est diagnostiqu. Sa maladie, qu'il n'avait pas rendue publique, progresse ensuite au stade 4. Le 28 aot 2020, g de 43ans, Chadwick Boseman meurt son domicile de Los Angeles des suites de ce cancer. Sa famille indique dans un communiqu publi sur les rseaux sociaux qu'incarner le roi T'Challa dans Black Panther avait t le grand honneur de sa famille[18]. Le communiqu indique galement que tous [ces films] ont t films pendant et entre dinnombrables chirurgies et chimiothrapies[19]. La National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) flicite Boseman pour avoir montr comment vaincre ladversit avec grce et marcher comme un roi, sans perdre le contact commun[20]. TOLGA AKMEN / AFP Getty Images(1976-2020)Who Was Chadwick Boseman had early success as a stage actor, writer and director, before landing gigs on TV shows like Lincoln Heights. Boseman broke through with his big screen portrayals of two African American icons: baseball player Jackie Robinson in 42, and soul singer James Brown in Get on Up. Boseman later took on the role of Black Panther for a series of Marvel superhero films, including the immensely successful Black Panther in early 2018. Early Life and CareerChadwick Aaron Boseman was born in 1976 in South Carolina and went on to attend Howard University in Washington, D.C., graduating with a series of Marvel superhero films, including the immensely successful Black Panther in early 2018. Bachelor of Fine Arts in directing. (In 2018, he gave the commencement speech at Howard and received an honorary degree, Doctor of Humane Letters.) He then attended the British American Drama Academy in Oxford, England. Boseman has performed in a number of stage productions, including Breathe, Romeo and Juliet, Bootleg Blues, Zooman, and Willie's Cut and Shine. He won an AUDELCO award for his role as the teen E.J. in 2002's Urban Transitions: Loose Blossoms, a play by Ron Milner about a struggling African American family pulled in by the temptation of fast cash. He's also worked as part of the Hip Hop Theatre Festival and has written the plays Hieroglyphic Graffiti, Deep Azure and Rhyme Deferred. Additionally, he has directed a number of stage productions, as well as the short film Blood Over a Broken Pawn. Starring Roles on TVB oseman started to make a name for himself on TV in the mid-2000s, with guest spots on crime dramas like Third Watch and CSI:NY, and on the soap opera All My Children. Additionally, he was one of the performers for the award-winning audio version of the 2005 novel Upstate, by Kalisha Buckhanon. In 2008 Boseman landed a recurring role as Nathaniel Ray on the ABC Family drama Lincoln Heights, which focused on a suburban family who relocates to the urban community where the police officer patriarch was raised. The series ran for four seasons, with Boseman featured during the last two. During this period, he also had guest-starring roles on ER, Lie to Me, The Glades and Cold Case. Movies The express, a sports biopic about renowned running back Ernie Davis, who played for Syracuse University during the civil rights era. The film co-starred Rob Brown and Dennis Quaid, with Boseman featured as fellow running back Floyd Little. Boseman would land his next prominent role as Graham McNair, a Muslim sergeant, on the 2010 NBC summer thriller Persons Unknown. On the series, seven people are kidnapped and trapped in a town by an unknown entity. The following year, Boseman landed additional guest spots on the shows Justified, Detroit 1-8-7, Fringe and Castle.In 2012 Boseman played the lead role in the film The Kill Hole, directed by Mischa Webley. The indie production revolves around the life of a Portland, Oregon, taxi driver who's also an Iraq War veteran, haunted by memories of his past and drafted for a new mission by a private firm. Playing Jackie Robinson in '42'Around the same time, Boseman won the lead role in the Jackie Robinson biopic 42, which tells the story of the legendary baseball player who broke racial barriers by becoming the first African American to play in the majors in the 20th century. The film, written and directed by Brian Helgeland, and co-starring Harrison Ford as Brooklyn Dodgers executive Branch Rickey, was released in 2013. "I'm overwhelmed by it," Boseman told the online publication Madame Noire about his role as the baseball legend. "It's just a huge responsibility. I wake up every morning, been working and prepping on it, and I'm having the time of my life, playing baseball ... studying footage. It's the opportunity of a lifetime to just do what I love." Movie audiences seemed impressed with all of Boseman's hard work on the project the film earned $95 million in its initial release. After his starring role in 42, Boseman's hard work on the project the film earned $10 morrow by the National Association of Theater Owners in February 2014. Boseman then appeared in the 2014 football film Draft Day, with Kevin Costner and Jennifer Garner. Taking On James Brown in Get on Up, a story that producer Brian Grazer had spent years trying to bring to the big screen. He was finally able to get the movie going with help from Mick Jagger. Directed by Tate Taylor, Get on Up follows Brown through his personal struggles and successes. Boseman had to master the fast and furious footwork that the Godfather of Soul was famous for in the film According to an interview with Moviefone.com, becoming James Brown was "a huge challenge" but also "a very intense and rewarding experience." Get on Up hit theaters in August 2014. Boseman next surfaced in Gods of Egypt (2016), playing Thoth, the god of wisdom. He then starred in the revenge thriller Message from the King, which premiered at the Toronto Film Festival later that year. 'Black Panther'Also in 2016, Boseman joined the Marvel Cinematic fare with his appearance in the superhero ensemble blockbuster Captain America: Civil War. He played T'Challa, king of the African country of Wakanda, who becomes the powerful Black Panther. Following a return to dramatic fare with Thurgood (2017), about a case early in the legal career of Justice Thurgood Marshall, Boseman was ready for his superhero closeup in Black Panther. The film not only shattered box office records upon its February 2018 release, raking in an estimated $218 million domestically over the four-day President's Day weekend, it went on to earn an Academy Award nomination for Best Picture.Boseman's Black Panther later rejoined Iron Man, Thor, Captain America and other Marvel cohorts on screen for Avengers: Endgame (2019). Having established his leading-man chops, Boseman next starred in 21 Bridges (2019), as an NYPD detective on the hunt for two cop killers.'Ma Rainey's Black Bottom'In what would be his final role, Boseman played trumpeter Levee Green in the on-screen adaptation of Ma Rainey's Black Bottom. The role won Boseman posthumous Golden Globe, Critics Choice and SAG awards and an Oscar nomination. DeathBoseman passed away on August 28, 2020, from colon cancer. "It is with immeasurable grief that we confirm the passing of Chadwick Boseman," a statement posted on his social media accounts read. Through his two-decade career, he appeared in a number of projects spanning both blockbuster and independent films, and received various accolades, including a Golden Globe Award, a Primetime Emmy Award, and a nomination for an Academy Award University and began his career in theatre. Boseman won a Drama League Directing Fellowship and an acting AUDELCO, along with receiving a Jeff Award nomination for his 2005 play Deep Azure. Transitioning to the screen, his first major role was as a series regular on the NBC drama Persons Unknown (2010) and he landed his breakthrough role as baseball player Jackie Robinson in 42 (2013). He continued to portray historical figures, starring as singer James Brown in Get on Up (2014) and as Thurgood Marshall in Marshall (2017). Boseman achieved international fame for playing the Marvel Comics superhero T'Challa (Black Panther) in the Marvel Comics superhero the Marvel named in the 2018 Time 100. Boseman's final performance as the character in the Disney+ anthology series What If...? (2021) earned him a posthumous Primetime Emmy Award for Outstanding Character Voice-Over Performance. In 2016, Boseman was diagnosed with colon cancer. He kept his condition private, continuing to act until his death from the illness in 2020. For his final film role, the drama Ma Rainey's Black Bottom (2020), he received the Golden Globe and SAG Awards for Best Actor, along with a posthumous nomination in the same category at the 93rd Academy Awards. Chadwick Aaron Boseman[6][7] was born and raised in Anderson, South Carolina, [8][9][10] the son of Carolyn (ne Mattress)[11][12] and Leroy Boseman, both African-American.[13] His mother was a nurse, and his father worked at a textile factory and managed an upholstery business.[14] In his youth, Boseman practiced martial arts,[15] and continued this training as an adult.[16] As a child, he wanted to become an architect.[17]
According to Boseman, DNA testing indicated that some of his ancestors were Jola people from Guinea-Bissau, [18] Krio people and Limba people from Sierra Leone, and Yoruba people from Sierra Leone, and Yoruba people from T. L. Hanna High School in 1995, where he played on the basketball team. [20][21] In his junior year, he wrote his first play, Crossroads, and staged it at the school after a classmate was shot and killed.[14] He competed in Speech and Debate in the National Tournament.[22] He was recruited to play basketball at college but chose the arts instead,[23] attending college at Howard University in Washington, D.C., and graduating in 2000 with a Bachelor of Fine Arts in directing.[24] While at Howard, he worked in an African Americanoriented bookstore near the university, which friend Vanessa German said was important and inspirational to him;[15] he drew on his experience there for his play Hieroglyphic Graffiti.[25] His teachers at Howard included Al Freeman Jr. and Phylicia Rashad, who became a mentor.[25][14] Rashad helped raise funds, notably from her friend and prominent actor Denzel Washington,[7] so that Boseman and other classmates could attend the Oxford Summer Program of the British American Drama Academy at Balliol College, Oxford, in England, to which they had been accepted.[14][26] Boseman wanted to write and direct, and initially began studying acting to learn how to relate to actors.[27] He attended the program in 1998, and he developed an appreciation for the playwriting of William Shakespeare;[15] additionally, he studied the works of various dramatists, including Samuel Beckett and Harold Pinter.[25] He also traveled to Africa for the first time while at college, working in Ghana with his professor Mike Malone "to preserve and celebrate rituals with performances of [his] life".[28] After he returned to the U.S., he took additional course work in film studies, graduating from New York City's Digital Film Academy.[29][30]Boseman lived in Brooklyn, New York City, at the start of his career.[14] In 2000, he was named a Drama League Directing Fellow. He directed productions including George C. Wolfe's The Colored Museum[23][31] (Wolfe would later direct Boseman in his final role)[32] and a staging of Amiri Baraka's Dutchman.[23] He worked as the drama instructor in the Schomburg Junior Scholars Program, housed at the Schomburg Junior Scholars Program, housed at the Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture in Harlem between 2002 and 2009.[6][33]He rose to prominence as a playwright and stage actor in 2002, performing in multiple productions and winning an AUDELCO award in 2002 for his part in Ron Milner's Urban Transitions.[23] As a member of the National Shakespeare Company of New York, he played Romeo and Juliet and Malcolm in Macbeth.[34] He directed and wrote plays[35][36] as part of the Hip-hop theater movement; his works included Rhyme Deferred (co-written with Howard classmate Kamilah Forbes), in which he also performed, and Hieroglyphic Graffiti.[23][37][38][39] Rhyme Deferred was commissioned for a national tour, as well as featuring in The Fire This Time anthology of works, while Hieroglyphic Graffiti was produced at a variety of locations, including the National Black Theatre Festival in 2001.[23] Combining modern African-American culture and Egyptian deities, it is set in Washington, D.C. and was picked up by the New York Hip-Hop Theatre Festival and Tennessee State University's summer stock theatre program in 2002.[40] It was also the Kuntu Repertory Theatre's 200203 season launch production. At the 2002 Hip-Hop Theatre Festival Boseman also gave a one-man show called "Red Clay and Carved Concrete".[34]In 2003, Boseman was cast in his first television role, an episode of Third Watch,[41] and began playing Reggie Montgomery in the daytime soap opera All My Children.[42] He was fired from All My Children.[42] He was fired from All My Children.[41] and began playing Reggie Montgomery in the daytime soap opera All My Children.[42] He was fired from All My Children.[42] He was fired from All My Children.[42] He was fired from All My Children.[41] and began playing Reggie Montgomery in the daytime soap opera All My Children.[42] He was fired from All My Children.[42] He was fired from All My Children.[42] He was fired from All My Children.[41] and began playing Reggie Montgomery in the daytime soap opera All My Children.[42] He was fired from All My Childr the script; the role was subsequently re-cast, with Boseman's future Black Panther co-star Michael B. Jordan taking the part.[43][44] Boseman had wanted to work around the stereotypes of the character, feeling that being in a soap opera would give him more room for improvisation as the writers often do not initially plan a full story;[45] his (thenfuture) agent said that when Boseman was given the second script and learned that his character's parents were a drug addict and an absent father, Boseman confronted the creators.[44] He reflected on the experience in his 2018 commencement address to Howard University, saying that it "seemed to be wrapped up in assumptions about us as black folks [and he] would have to make something out of nothing."[45] His other early television work included episodes of the series Law & Order, Cold Case, CSI: NY, and ER.[6]Boseman's best-known play, Deep Azure, was commissioned in 2004 by the Congo Square Theatre Company in Chicago. It was nominated for a 2006 Jeff Award for Best New Work.[37][23] Boseman said at the time that Deep Azure was "a fusion and progression of [his] previous plays", which he did not feel fit wholly in the Hip Hop theater genre.[23] The play about police brutality, a daring subject in 2004, and largely delivered in rhyme was workshopped at the Apollo Theater in New York.[46][47] Drama critic Chris Jones in the Chicago Tribune highly praised the work.[46] In 2008, Boseman turned Deep Azure into a screenplay. Michael Greene, who would become his agent, picked it up and contacted Boseman when Tessa Thompson and Omari Hardwick expressed an interest in playing the lead roles, prompting Boseman's move to Los Angeles.[44] He also directed, wrote, and produced the short film Blood Over a Broken Pawn in 2007, which was honored at the 2008 Hollywood Black Film Festival.[37][48]In 2008, Boseman moved to Los Angeles to pursue his film and acting career.[26] He was cast in a recurring role on the television series Lincoln Heights as Nathaniel Ray Taylor, an army veteran with PTSD who was later revealed to be the son of the main character before re-enlisting.[49] He also appeared in his first regular role in the 2010 television series Persons Unknown as the Marine Graham McNair.[51] The show received mediocre reviews that felt the characters were all archetypes with little development.[52][53] In July 2013, Boseman's breakthrough at the HollyShorts Film Festival.[54]Boseman reflects on Jackie Robinson at a film workshop of 42 in the State Dining Room of the White House, April 2013. Boseman's breakthrough role came in 2013 with the film 42, in which he portrayed the lead role of baseball legend Jackie Robinson.[50][55] Boseman had been seriously in the East Village when he auditioned for the role,[56] and was considering giving up acting to pursue directing full-time.[57] About twenty-five other actors had been seriously considered for the role, but director Brian Helgeland liked Boseman's bravery in choosing to read the most difficult scene, in which Robinson goes down a stadium tunnel and breaks a bat in anger, and cast him after he had auditioned twice. [58][24][59] Part of the auditioned twice. League as a child but was primarily a basketball player growing up, saying that in this part the casting directors likely noticed his athleticism rather than specifically baseball skills.[56] Robinson's mannerisms, Boseman trained for five months with professional baseball coaches who "would tape [his] practices every few weeks, and they would basically split-screen [his technique] with [Robinson's]" to allow him to compare.[56] After having portrayed football player Little in The Express, Boseman was encouraged by stunt coordinator Allan Graf to approach running 42. The same way, as Robinson had also been a college football player. [56] The same year, Boseman also starred in the independent film The Kill Hole, which was released in theaters a few weeks before 42. [61]President Barack Obama greets Boseman in the East Room, April 2013. Critics, even those who viewed the film negatively, felt that Boseman being a relatively unknown actor was a benefit when playing an icon and an athlete; Mick LaSalle of San Francisco Chronicle wrote that "as [...] played by Chadwick Boseman, Robinson is a hero we can recognize",[62] and Mary Pols for Time said that "Boseman is not a hugely close physical match to Robinson, except for perhaps in the power he conveys, but he's a great choice to play the ball player".[63] The Guardian's Mike McCahill noted that "Boseman hits his key scenes out of the park", but felt the film would not interest people who are not baseball fans,[64] with Dana Stevens of Slate suggesting that the film made black history "squeaky-clean" and did both Robinson and Boseman's performance as him a disservice.[65]Boseman and others involved in Get on Up at the 2014 Deauville American Film FestivalIn 2014, Boseman starred in another sporting film, Draft Day, as fictional football player Vontae Mack.[66][67] He had workshopped the Tupac Shakur jukebox musical Holler If Ya Hear Me in 2013, but did not continue to Broadway with it in order to take the role of James Brown in 2014's Get on Up.[23] As Brown, Boseman did some singing and all of his own dancing,[68] working with choreographer Aakomon Jones for five to eight hours a day over two months in preparation. Producer Mick Jagger also directed him on interacting with audiences when performing live music.[69] He had not wanted to take a role in another biopic so soon after playing an icon in Robinson, saying he "wasn't looking to do it again for another 15, 20 years",[69] but was sought out as director Tate Taylor's only choice.[26] Co-star Dan Aykroyd, who had known Brown, praised Boseman's performance, saying that it was neither replication nor impression and that he "did not have to squint sitting across from [Boseman] to imagine that [he] was talking to [Brown]".[69] Boseman also stayed in character between filming on set; Taylor said this was not a method acting approach, and more a necessity due to Boseman holding his vocal cords unnaturally to imitate Brown's southern drawl. [26] His performance was praised as the highlight of a generally well received movie, with the Rotten Tomatoes critical consensus reading: "With an unforgettable Chadwick Boseman in the starring role, Get On Up offers the Godfather of Soul a fittingly dynamic homage."[70] Among the critics was Time's Richard Corliss (hyperbolically)[71] saving that Boseman. Donald Clarke of The Irish Times said that "Get on Up tested every weapon in the actor's arsenal [and his] performance confirmed that, like a star from Hollywood's golden age, Chadwick Boseman could do it all with style."[73]Boseman had sold a thriller screenplay to Universal Pictures in 2014, which he continued to collaborate on with creative partner Logan Coles and planned to star in, and told The Guardian that he still wanted to be a director but would explore his acting career first, adding that "maybe it'll be easier if you're a successful actor".[26][71] In 2016, he starred as Thoth, a deity from Egyptian mythology, in Gods of Egypt.[74] Boseman was one of the few actors of color featured in the film, which had drawn criticism for using a predominantly white cast to portray Egyptian characters. Agreeing with the criticism, Boseman said this had motivated him to accept the role, to ensure one of the film's African descent.[14] Boseman's own casting was criticized for falling under the "Magical Negro" stereotype. The Independent reported that Boseman shook his head while telling GQ in an interview that "people don't make $140 million movies starring black and brown people".[75] It was his first largely CGI film, and he expressed that he preferred acting alongside people than with blue screens and prop stand-ins.[71] The film was heavily criticized; Jordan Hoffman for The Guardian said that it lacks story or interesting characters, but "Boseman makes for nice comic relief as the witty Thoth", [76] with Will Leitch of The New Republic saving that his then-upcoming Marvel Studios role may have to work "to make you forget he was ever in this movie". [77] Perri Nemiroff for Collider said that Boseman shines as "the only cast member who really seems to understand the movie he's in".[78]Boseman and Black Panther co-star Lupita Nyong'o at the 2017 San Diego Comic-ConIn 2016, Boseman began portraying the Marvel Cinematic Universe. Captain America: Civil War was his first film in a five-picture deal with Marvel Entertainment. [79][80] He did not audition for the role, instead having a "discussion about what [Marvel] wanted to do and how [he] saw it and what [he] wanted to do."[81] While working on Civil War, Boseman learned some Xhosa from John Kani, who played his father, and insisted on using the language for the character.[44] Boseman also developed a Wakandan accent himself, and used it during the entire production "whether he was on camera or not".[82] When asked by journalist Ryan Gilbey if he felt pressure not to "screw up" the beloved comics character, Boseman responded by saying: "It's more positive than that. It's more like: 'Seize it. Enjoy it.'"[83] He told the Associated Press, though, that he more identified with the Black Panther's nemesis, Killmonger, knowing that his roots to his African past had been severed. [28] Producer Kevin Feige explained that the Black Panther was included in Civil War "because [they] needed a third party. [It] needed fresh eyes [of a character] who wasn't embedded with the Avengers and who has a very different point of view than either Tony or Steve."[84][85] Boseman's performance in Civil War was highly praised, though critics acknowledged the character's inclusion was largely to set up his upcoming headlining movie.[86]We know what it's like to be told there isn't a screen for you to be featured on. [...] We know what it's like to be beneath and not above. And that is what we went to work with every day. We knew that we could create a world that exemplified a world that exemplified a world we wanted to see. We knew that we had something to give. Boseman accepting the Screen Actors Guild Award for Outstanding Performance by a Cast in a Motion Picture in 2019. [28] Boseman returned as the Black Panther in Black Panther (2018),[87] directed by Ryan Coogler,[88] which focused on the character and his home country of Wakanda in Africa. The film opened to great anticipation, becoming one of the highest-grossing films. The role earned Boseman a spot on the 2018 Time 100 as one of the world's most influential people, with Sean Combs writing his entry.[89] It is seen as a landmark in being the first mega-budget movie to have a predominantly black cast and director, as well as the first superhero film to be nominated for an Academy Award for Best Picture.[90] The film received universal acclaim and Boseman was praised; Matthew Norman for the Evening Standard said that he "brings a measure of sub-Shakespearean gravitas to T'Challa's struggle to bear the weight of his crown";[91] Richard Lawson and Sight & Sound's Kelli Weston also noted the strength of gravitas Boseman gave to the performance.[92][93] Weston added that he, "despite having the more thankless role [out of T'Challa and Killmonger], carries the film with a quiet dignity one might rightfully expect of a man raised to be king."[93] Todd McCarthy and The Village Voice's Kristen Yoonsoo Kim saw that while Boseman played his serious character well, the cast was full of charismatic scene stealers.[94][95] Peter Travers gave much praise to Boseman as the lead, and said that he "digs so deep into T'Challa that you can feel his nerve endings";[96] LaSalle wrote that "Boseman commands every moment of this film, radiating probity and purpose, and it's only later on that you realize that, with another actor, this wouldn't have been a sure thing."[97]He reprised the role in both Avengers: Endgame, which were released in 2018 and 2019, respectively. Both films were the highest grossing of the year they were released, with Endgame going on to become the highest-grossing film of all time.[98] Infinity War was filmed at the same time as Black Panther, and Boseman and other actors playing Wakandan characters improvised chanting scenes in the former that originated in the latter. [99] Boseman's last physical appearance as Black Panther was in Endgame, at Tony Stark's funeral; [28] he voiced alternate versions of T'Challa in the 2021 Disney+ animated series What If...? [100][101]Boseman portrayed Thurgood Marshall in the biographical film Marshall in 2017. Set years before he became the first African American Supreme Court Justice, the movie focuses on one of Marshall's early cases, the trial of Joseph Spell. It was premiered at Howard University, which both Boseman and Marshall, [103] Boseman was still worried about being put into a "biopic box", and felt that he didn't look enough like the real Marshall, [104] but took the role because he enjoyed the script "separate from the historical relevance";[105] he had expected big courtroom speeches but found that in the case Marshall was silenced by the judge and had to mentor white co-counsel Sam Friedman (Josh Gad) to take on his first criminal case.[106][107] He told The New York Times that he liked this element of the story because "it doesn't allow you as an audience member, no matter what color you are, to hide from the issues".[108] Boseman researched Marshall's wiry frame.[105] The film opened to an average critical reception, though Boseman's performance was praised [109][110] However, Vulture criticized his casting, noting that, unlike Boseman, "the real-life Marshall was a light-skinned man, and his place on the color spectrum undoubtedly influenced how he became such a legend."[111] Boseman had been concerned about their differences before taking the role, but was convinced by the director and producer that as the film was telling an insular story it did not matter as much. [107]In 2019, he starred in 21 Bridges, an American action thriller film directed by Brian Kirk, as an NYPD detective who shuts down the eponymous twenty-one bridges of Manhattan to find two suspected cop killers. He was approached to work on the film by two of its producers, Avengers directors the Russo brothers, at the Infinity War premiere.[112] While 21 Bridges was filming, the Russos and Boseman were working on Endgame.[113] Boseman was also a producer on 21 Bridges, something he said was made clear to him in his early conversations with the production team;[112] the three producers are given a nod in one of the film's opening lines, when a character is described as an "avenger".[114] All of the film's characters were originally conceived as male and white, with Boseman encouraging amendments to this and other parts of the story.[112] In his capacity as a producer, Boseman sought out Sienna Miller to be his co-star; Miller, who was intending to take a break from acting while her daughter was young, asked for a salary that the studio would not meet, and so Boseman donated the rest from his own pay.[115] He also personally called Stephan James to ask him to play one of the criminals Boseman's detective is hunting; the two actors had been planning to work more together after the film.[113] Boseman said that he and Coles "fought for casting and for actors that brought particular sensibilities and feelings".[112]As an actor, Boseman developed his character by going on calls with the NYPD and LAPD,[116] which he said influenced the writing after he fed back his experiences, and learning how to fire blanks and handle a gun with a police weapons specialist.[117] While the film vas indelicate in its storytelling, but that Boseman "finds a surprising amount to work with in such a basic, stock character",[119] while the Los Angeles Times said that "Chadwick Boseman and thin characters cannot keep 21 Bridges from collapsing".[120] Glenn Kenny of RogerEbert.com was more positive towards the film, writing that "it's no small feat to tie up an intelligent action thriller with such assuredness" and that "Boseman [...] does a lot of running and driving and gunpointing and car-hood slamming here, but his character also does a lot of thinking and a lot of maneuvering."[121]In 2019, Boseman was announced as part of the cast for the Netflix films Da 5 Bloods, directed by Spike Lee, and Ma Rainey's Black Bottom, directed by George C. Wolfe.[122][123] He took these "bucket-list roles" for opportunities to work with Lee and with Ma Rainey producer Denzel Washington, as well as the opportunity to perform in an August Wilson play, telling Entertainment Weekly that he wanted to make these non-superhero films because "if you don't do the films that you plan to do, I think you wouldn't feel fulfilled as an artist."[123] He was also cast in a film telling the story of Yasuke, the only non-Asian samurai and the first black man in Japan, which he was set to co-produce; Boseman said: "[the story is] not just an action movie, [it is] a cultural event, an exchange, and I am excited to be part of it."[124] Time included Boseman on their list of the 10 Best Movie Performances of 2020, for both Da 5 Bloods and Ma Rainey; [125] for Ma Rainey, Boseman received posthumous nominations in the Best Actor category at the Academy Awards, British Academy Film Awards, Golden Globe Awards, and Screen Actors Guild Awards, [127] Da 5 Bloods was released on June 12, 2020.[128] Lee, in choosing Boseman for the divine-like character of Stormin' Norman, said: "This character is heroic; he's a superhero. Who do we cast? We cast Jackie Robinson, James Brown, Thurgood Marshall, and we cast? We cast Jackie Robinson, James Brown, Thurgood Marshall, and we cast? We wrote that Boseman played Norman "with movie-star charisma and classic war-movie grit",[130] and Empire's Kambole Campbell said his performance had "regal charisma",[131] while Chuck Bowen of Slant said that he "has a hauntingly gaunt presence, but he's already played too many saints."[132] The A.V. Club's Ashley Ray-Harris felt the lack of digital de-aging for the other characters was unsuccessful in its aims and that "Lee's script doesn't give Boseman much to do outside of this confused, Christ-like characterization and never exposes Norman's own navet."[133] Conversely, Peter Bradshaw of The Guardian saw it as a reflection that "[he] has grown not old as those that are left grew old", and a way to show how Norman has been romanticized in his comrades' memories;[134] Odie Henderson of RogerEbert.com had a similar view and said that Boseman was "a perfect casting move", with the actor already carrying such a mythical status in black culture that he does not need to do much to be a believable mythical black icon as Norman. [135] For the songs, rituals and folklore that were lost in slavery's middle passage, [August Wilson's work was influenced by the blues of Bessie Smith, Muddy Waters and W. C. Handy, my plays were infused with Tupac, Biggie and Black Star.Boseman on August Wilson, 2013.[28] The film Ma Rainey's Black Bottom, in which Boseman co-stars as trumpeter Levee, was released after the actor's death in 2020.[136] Director Wolfe said that Boseman was excited by the role for the challenge it posed, saying that "it's a monster role and it's a thrilling role, it's a difficult role. All of those things are exhilarating for an actor. And [Boseman] rose to the occasion and more than delivered."[32] The film is based on the August Wilson play of the same name; Boseman was a fan of Wilson and wrote about him and his inspiration on Boseman's own work in a 2013 essay for the Los Angeles Times.[28][123] According to Chris Jones, Boseman's Levee is "an astonishing, revelatory performance and formidably distinct from the numerous interpretations seen on the stage";[136] A. O. Scott of The New York Times similarly opined that "it will be hard, from now on, to imagine [...] a Levee to compare with Boseman."[137] Angelica Jade Bastin for Vulture wrote at length on Boseman's performance, saying that "many of the important turns in the film hinge on Boseman's presence at the center. [...] In the first of his lachrymose monologues, Boseman is called to embody [anger and] gives the scene his all."[138] Charlotte O'Sullivan of the Evening Standard said Boseman was brave to take on a "more curdled" role than the heroic leaders he is best known for, and that "as skilful as he was talented, [he] hits the right notes, all the time."[139] Clarisse Loughrey wrote that it was the actor's finest performance, that "when [he] rages against an unjust God [...] it strikes like thunder" and is "delivered with such grace that there's a sense he had another hundred performances like it still in him. "[140]In 2022, Boseman posthumously won the Primetime Emmy Award for Outstanding Character Voice-Over Performance for the What If...? episode What If...? episode What If...? episode What If...? episode What If...? "Boseman was a virtuoso actor who had the rare ability to create a character from the outside in and the inside out [and he] knew how to fuse with a role. etching it in three dimensions [...] That's what made him an artist, and a movie star, too. Yet in Black Panther, he also became that rare thing, a culture hero" [143] Similarly, reviewer Richard Brody in The New Yorker finds the originality of Boseman's formidable acting technique in his ability to empathize with the interior lives of his characters, according to the characters, according to the New York Times critic Wesley Morris.[145] Well known for taking biopic roles, Hanna Flint for the BBC said he became the frequent choice because of his dedication to embodying character.[17] Peter Bradshaw wrote of the actor's "beauty, his grace, his style, his presence [...] These made up Chadwick Boseman's persona [and he became] the lost prince of American cinema[,] glorious and inspirational".[146]Culture writer Steve Rose, in The Guardian, said that Boseman's career was revolutionary and he "leaves behind a gamechanging legacy", attributing this to the actor's careful planning and selection of roles. Eulogizing him, Rose wrote:[147]Chadwick Boseman began his career playing African American icons and pioneers; he ends it as one himself. His [...] achievements, as an actor and as a cultural force, will surely prove to be as heroic as those of the characters he portrayed. At the very least, he leaves the film-making landscape looking very different to how it was when he entered it. A cosplay of the Black Panther at FanimeCon 2018As the Black Panther, Boseman led a predominantly black cast in a major blockbuster for the first time;[17] Variety said that "the significance of Chadwick Boseman [...] to the African American and Black community is immeasurable."[148] Further expressing the weight of Boseman's legacy, Robert Daniels wrote for Vulture that "his performance [as T'Challa] wouldn't just be a demonstration of craft [...] It'd become a piece of history. He'd face a slew of pressures, because a Black epic, even a period piece, is forever expected to be important, representative of the past, present, and future."[149] He told BBC Culture that "through his acting, [Boseman] wrote, rewrote, and reclaimed black history".[17]

Boseman's Ma Rainey co-star Viola Davis told Rose that "he is going to be remembered as a hero", both as the Black Panther and for the authentic man he was, and that "his legacy, his body of work, his integrity, is going to influence on generations upon generations to come."[150] BBC Culture called him "a film icon who changed Hollywood"; "a symbol of black excellence and of cinematic excellence"; and "a virtuoso and heroic figure, not just because of his iconic turn as Marvel's Black Panther but for how he raised the bar for racial equality and representation on screen."[17]Rhea Combs, film curator of the Smithsonian National Museum of African American History and Culture, said that with his screen presence, Boseman "was not only a conduit to the past and the way African-Americans persevered and pushed through so many challenges, he also represented brightness and the promise of tomorrow".[151] The BBC also noted his impact of infusing African authenticity into his work, including his motivations for taking a role in Gods of Egypt as well as how T'Challa is presented, saying that he "connect[s] African American audiences with their African heritage".[17]His alma mater, Howard University, renamed its College of Fine Arts in honor of Boseman on May 26, 2021.[152] On March 19, 2024, the Anderson School District Five Board of Trustees, the school district in which Boseman attended, renamed the performing arts center at Southwood Academy of the Arts in his honor.[153] The Harlem Globetrotters honored Boseman by selecting him as their draft pick.[154]X-Men '97, the revival of X-Men: The Animated Series, premiered on March 20, 2024, in Disney+ but featured T'Chaka instead of T'Challa as the show's Black Panther despite Fantastic Four having previously established T'Challa as the current Black Panther. When asked about this continuity error on his Twitter account, showrunner Beau DeMayo stated that when developing the show's first season in early 2021, he and Marvel Studios felt it was too soon to feature T'Challa since Boseman's death so they chose to "put humanity before continuity" by featuring T'Chaka instead.[155] For Black Panther: Wakanda Forever, Marvel opted to not recast TChalla. They instead had the character die off screen at the beginning of the film. His sister Shuri, played by Letitia Wright, would later succeed him as Black Panther. Boseman began dating singer Taylor Simone Ledward in 2015.[156] The two reportedly got engaged by October 2019, and they later married in secret, as revealed by Boseman's family in a statement announcing his death.[157][156]Boseman was raised a Christian and was baptized. He was part of a church choir and youth group and his former pastor said that he still kept his death.[157][156]Boseman was raised a Christian and was baptized. faith.[158]Outside of performing, Boseman supported various charities. He worked with cancer charities including St. Jude Children's Research Hospital, continuing to support those battling the disease up until his own death from it; in a message to a producer days before he died, Boseman inquired about sending gifts to childhood cancer patients [159] He donated $10,000 to the Boys and Girls Club of Harlem to provide free tickets for children who wanted to see Black Panther:[citation needed] he did this to support and promote the Black Panther:[citation needed] he did this to support and promote the Black Panther:[citation needed] he did this to support and promote the Black Panther Challenge started by a New Yorker to raise money for similar children across the country. In response, Disney donated $1million to the Boys & Girls Clubs to advance its STEM programs.[160] Boseman advocated for children's charities, with the Jackie Robinson Foundation noting after his death that he helped with their youth outreach. When Disney planned to donate $4.2million in personal protective equipment to hospitals fighting the COVID-19 pandemic in black communities, starting his own Operation 42 challenge to encourage others to donate PPE.[161][159]In politics, Boseman supported the When We All Vote campaign,[citation needed] and his last tweet before his death was congratulating Kamala Harris on her selection as Joe Biden's vice-presidential nominee.[162] Prior to the 2018 midterm elections, Boseman urged Twitter followers to visit VoteRiders online or call the organization's helpline to ensure eligible voters had the ID needed to cast a ballot.[163]Boseman was diagnosed with stage III colon cancer in 2016. It progressed to stage IV before 2020.[7] He never spoke publicly about his cancer diagnosis, and according to The Hollywood Reporter, "Only a handful of non-family members knew that Boseman was sick... with varying degrees of knowledge about the severity of [his] condition."[164] During treatment, involving multiple surgeries and chemotherapy, he continued to work and completed production for several films, including Marshall, Da 5 Bloods, Ma Rainey's Black Bottom, and others. Boseman died at his Los Angeles home as a result of complications related to colon cancer on August 28, 2020, with his wife and family by his side. [165][167] He was 43 years old. He died intestate, and his estate was governed by California law with the representation of Ledward, his widow.[168] A public memorial service was held on September 4, 2020, in Anderson, South Carolina. Speakers included Boseman portrayed in Get on Up.[169] The city announced plans for the creation of a permanent art memorial at the service.[170] Despite reports that Boseman was buried at Welfare Baptist Church cemetery in nearby Belton, South Carolina,[171] the funeral home handling the services and the church pastor both denied this.[172]Many fellow actors and other celebrities paid tribute to Boseman on social media following the announcement of his death, including a number of his Marvel Cinematic Universe co-stars. Marvel Studios president and CCO Kevin Feige called Boseman's death, "absolutely devastating", writing: "Each time he stepped on set, he radiated charisma and joy, and each time he stepped on set, he radiated char for the ages."[173][174] Co-stars from Boseman's other films also paid tribute to him.[175] His alma mater, Howard University, tweeted in reaction that "his incredible talent will forever be immortalized through his own personal journey from student to superhero".[176]On August 29, 2020, the day after Boseman died, the tweet in which his family announced his death on his Twitter account became the most-liked tweet in history, with over sixmillion likes in under 24 hours, [177][178] and accumulating over sevenmillion by August 31, far displacing the previous record holder. [179] His death was likened to other unexpected deaths of other celebrities in 2020, particularly Kobe Bryant and Naya Rivera.[180] The Associated Press and Clarn noted Rivera and Boseman as Hollywood's most impactful 2020 deaths.[181][182]Major League Baseball and the Los Angeles Dodgers, the franchise for which Jackie Robinson played when the team was at its former home of Brooklyn, New York, issued statements honoring Boseman, in light of his acclaimed portrayal of the player.[183][184] Several publications noted Boseman died on the observance of Jackie Robinson.[185][186] Prior to the fifth game between the Los Angeles Lakers and the Portland Trail Blazers in the NBA playoffs, Boseman was honored with a moment of silence, alongside Cliff Robinson and Lute Olson.[187] When Lewis Hamilton claimed pole position in qualifying at the 2020 Belgian Grand Prix, he dedicated his lap to Boseman, as well as his race win the following day.[188]Wikinews has related news: Tributes paid to recently deceased US actor Chadwick BosemanOn August 28, 2020, a Change.org petition was started, seeking to replace a Confederate monument in his hometown of Anderson with a statue of Boseman; it collected more than 50,000 signatures in less than a week, surpassing its original goal of 15,000 signatures.[189] Henry McMaster, the Governor of South Carolina, ordered the Statehouse flags be lowered to half-staff on August 30 in honor of Boseman, who was born and raised in the state.[190] ABC (which, like Marvel Entertainment, is owned by Disney) aired a commercial-free version of Black Panther, followed by a special about Boseman's life and work titled Chadwick Boseman A Tribute for a King on the same day.[191][192] Also aired on August 30 was the 2020 MTV Video Music Awards; the ceremony was dedicated to Boseman at Downtown Disney in Anaheim, California.[194] In February 2021, another mural dedicated to Boseman was painted at Trilith Studios in Fayetteville, Georgia, by artist Brandon Sadler.[195][196] Following his Best Actor win at the Academy Awards in April 2021, Anthony Hopkins said, "I want to pay tribute to Chadwick Boseman, who was taken from us far too early, and again thank you all very much."[197]Boseman is also memorialized in the 2020 video game Marvel's Spider-Man: Miles Morales. The game includes an after-credits message dedicating it in memory of Boseman, as well as referring to Boseman's portrayal of Jackie Robinson. A Wakandan flag also appears. [198] Amazon also made Black Panther comic titles available for free on its ComiXology platform in the wake of Boseman's death. [199][200] On November 29, 2020, Marvel changed the studio's logo animation in the opening of Black Panther on Disney+ to include images of Boseman from the film, as well as his appearances in Captain America: Civil War, Avengers: Infinity War, and Avengers: Endgame, to honor what would have been Boseman's 44th birthday.[201]In a 2020 tribute, Ryan Coogler, the director of Black Panther and its 2022 sequel, offered condolences to Boseman's family and said that he had spent the last year "preparing, imagining and writing words for him to say [in the sequel] that we weren't destined to see". Coogler and Marvel Studios executives were unaware of Boseman's illness until his death. [202][203] By the time of Boseman's death, Coogler was in the middle of writing the script and had already turned in a draft. [204][205] Also paying tribute, Feige confirmed that the role of T'Challa would not be recast. [206] Producer Nate Moore said that Boseman "was such an integral part of that character for us, both as the character and as a person, that we could not conceive of a version with having someone else on set".[207]Co-writers Coogler and Joe Robert Cole reworked the script following Boseman's death. The sequel, Black Panther: Wakanda Forever (2022), depicts T'Challa's death from illness and Wakandans processing the resultant grief; the Marvel Studios opening, usually featuring other MCU characters, only depicts the faint sound of wind and images of Boseman.[207][208] T'Challa's sister Shuri (played by Letitia Wright) would eventually succeed him as Black Panther. Wright struggled with becoming Black Panther on the sequel as she felt bitter about how that had come to pass, and felt guilty for doing it. She credited Coogler and her costar Danai Gurira for helping her with the transition.[209][210] The end credits featured the words "Dedicated to our friend Chadwick Boseman", and The Independent described Wakanda Forever as a "soulful Chadwick Boseman tribute".[211] Coogler said that while the film was a tribute to Boseman, it was also a tribute to the resilience of the cast to "honor Boseman".[207]On April 8, 2025, Hannah Beachler revealed on her X page that the way the church in the film Sinners was designed included crossed beams which made the "Wakanda forever" gesture and paid homage to Boseman.[212][213]YearTitleRoleNotesRef.2008The Express: The Ernie Davis StoryFloyd Little[214]Blood Over a Broken PawnShort film; director[54]2014Draft DayVontae Mack[216]Get On UpJames Brown[214]2016Gods of EgyptThoth[217]Captain America: Civil WarT'Challa / Black Panther[218]Message from the KingJacob KingAlso executive producer[220]2018Black Panther[221]Avengers: Infinity War[222]2019Avengers: Endgame[223]21 BridgesAndre DavisAlso producer[224]2020Da 5 BloodsNorman Earl "Stormin' Norm" Holloway[225]Ma Rainey's Black BottomLevee GreenPosthumous release; dedicated to his memory[227]YearTitleRoleNotesRef.2003All My ChildrenReggie MontgomeryRecurring role[43]Third WatchDavid WaferEpisode: "In Lieu of Johnson"[228]2004Law & OrderFoster KeyesEpisode: "Can I Get a Witness?"[228]2006CSI: NYRondoEpisode: "Street Money"[228]20082009Lincoln HeightsNathaniel "Nate" Ray TaylorRecurring role; 9 episodes[230]2009Lie to MeCabe McNeilEpisode: "Truth or Consequences" [231]2010Persons UnknownGraham McNairMain role; 13 episodes: "Poof, You're Dead" [229] The GladesMichael RichmondEpisode: "Poof, You're Dead" [231]2011CastleChuck RussellEpisode: "For Blood or Money"[229]FringeMark Little / Cameron JamesEpisode: "Subject 9"[235]2018Saturday Night LiveHimselfHost; episode: "Challa / T'Challa / T'Challa / Black PantherVoice; 4 episodesPosthumous release[237][101][238]YearTitleRoleNotesRef.1993CrossroadsPlaywrightUnproduced College play[14]19972000Rhyme DeferredCo-writerPerformerPart of the Hip Hop Theatre Anthology The Fire This Time[239]2002Hieroglyphic GraffitiPlaywright's Theatre Kuntu Repertory Theatre FestivalHip Hop Theatre Festival[34]2005Deep AzurePlaywrightProduced by Congo Square Theatre CompanyWork-shopped at the Folger Shakespeare LibraryApollo Theater[37]Main article: List of awards and nominations received by Chadwick BosemanHonorary degreesLocationDateSchoolDegreeDistrict of ColumbiaMay 12, 2018Howard UniversityDoctor of Humane Letters (DHL)[240]Boseman gave the commencement address at Howard University on May 12, 2018.[241]Chadwick Boseman: Portrait of an ArtistList of black Academy Award winners and nomineesList of posthumous Academy Award winners and nomineesList of black Golden Globe Award winners and nomineesList of black Academy Award winners and nomineesList of black Academy Award winners and nomineesList of black Boseman: Portrait of an ArtistList of black Academy Award winners and nomineesList of black Boseman was born in 1976 or 1977. making his birth year 1976.[1][2][3]^ Jackie Robinson Day is April 15, but in 2020 was observed on August 28 due to the COVID-19 pandemic.
