Hoover platinum collection carpet cleaner manual

It isn't easy to get carpet or upholstery clean: whether you're overdue for a deep cleaning or need to remove stuck-in stains and leftover messes, you can't just pull out your vacuum cleaner — you need something stronger. That's why you need a carpet and upholstery cleaner, which can clean deeper and scrub away dirt and grime that might be hiding deep in these materials. Every carpet and upholstery cleaner works differently and offers unique benefits. That's why it's important to consider and compare your options. There's a wealth of options, from special machines for pet owners to portable cleaners that can be used anywhere. If you're trying to decide between different models of carpet and upholstery cleaners, our buying guide can help you find the best option available. The Advantages of Owning a Carpet and Upholstery Cleaner Having a carpet and upholstery cleaner offers a ton of benefits: for one, you don't have to live with dirty carpeting, area rugs, or upholstered furniture. With a cleaning device of your own, you can eliminate stains, perform regular cleanings on a schedule, and get rid of built-up dirt and grime. You can give your home the deep clean it needs — a carpet cleaner will reach deeper than your vacuum, sucking up dirt that's trapped within fibers. And a carpet and upholstery cleaner is especially beneficial for high-traffic areas. These machines can remove even the most ground-in, long-lasting dirt with powerful scrub brushes, pressurized water and cleaning solution, and strong, effective suction. Additionally, if you deal with frequent spills, messes, and pet problems, a carpet and upholstery cleaner is very helpful. You can use the cleaner to tackle tough stains and messes, like tracked-in mud, pet messes or accidents on furniture, and spots caused by food or liquid spills. Many even include special accessories designed for these extra-tough carpet and upholstery woes. Deeply cleans carpet and upholstery fibers, offering beyond a surface-level clean. Can remove set-in stains as well as embedded dirt, grime, and more. Strong enough for the toughest messes, including pet stains, wine and coffee spills, and mud. Pressurized spray and strong suction remove dirt without any elbow grease. Can spot clean small areas and furniture or tackle larger rugs or areas of carpeted flooring. Easily dries carpet and fabric after use. Can extend the lifespan of your carpet, rugs, and upholstered items. Carpet and Upholstery Cleaner The Most Common Types of Carpet and Upholstery Cleaners Every carpet and upholstery cleaner is different. While each model promises to do the same job, each cleans differently and produces different results. The type of cleaner you choose will determine the cleaning method. That's why it's important to be aware of the most common types of carpet and upholstery cleaners. Here's what you need to know to choose the right option for your needs. Steam Cleaners Steam cleaners use steam — or hot water — to get your carpet and upholstery clean. These cleaning machines are designed to heat a mixture of water and cleaning solution, then turn it into high-pressured steam. That steam is shot right into your carpet or upholstery fibers, dissolving dirt and grime. The machine then extracts the dirt and the water. These types of cleaners are sometimes also called hot water extraction cleaners. A steam cleaner can loosen dirt and debris, and its rotating brushes can scrub deeply to get every angle. Your carpets will be damp once cleaning is finished, but they'll dry on their own in just a few hours. Encapsulation Cleaners Encapsulation cleaners are a type of carpet and upholstery cleaner that traps dirt particles. They use foam as they clean, applying a layer of soapy foam to your carpet or upholstery that creates crystals around any dirt that's present. The foam then dries, and you can use either a vacuum or a brush to get rid of whatever remains—it's a quick and easy cleaning method. Encapsulation carpet and upholstery cleaners don't require a lot of water like steam cleaners, and they dry much quicker. However, these types of cleaners may not be able to reach as deeply into your carpet or fabric to capture very embedded dirt. Bonneting Cleaners Bonneting cleaners are another option, and they're especially helpful for any carpet or upholstery that's seen a lot of wear and tear. These cleaning machines are ideal for high-traffic areas like hallways and entryways or even a much-loved couch or chair. They can clean very deeply and are strong enough to tackle the dirtiest fibers. A bonneting cleaner is a heavy-duty cleaning machine that uses a thick pad with a chemical cleaning solution. The pad rubs your carpet or upholstery, loosening dirt and grime. The only potential drawback of a bonneting cleaner is that it's only suitable for cleaning the topmost carpet and fabric surfaces. What to Consider When Buying Carpet and Upholstery Cleaners The best carpet and upholstery cleaners are designed for heavy-duty dirt. They should be able to tackle the toughest messes, including common woes such as coffee and wine spills, urine, and more. It's also important to consider portability when choosing the best carpet and upholstery cleaners. A lightweight cleaner allows you to carry it throughout your home and easily tackle hard-to-reach areas, like stairs or tight corners. Some portable cleaners can even be taken out into the garage so you can clean your car's interior, from the carpeting to the upholstered seats. The Most Important Features of Carpet and Upholstery Cleaners To clean your carpet and upholstery effectively, you'll want to choose a cleaner that offers specific features. The features make a world of difference — they can help a machine clean more effectively, more efficiently, and easily. When you're shopping for the best carpet and upholstery cleaner, you'll want to make sure to consider the following critical features. Brushes The brushes on a carpet and upholstery cleaner determine its cleaning power and effectiveness. You'll want to consider how many brushes a machine is equipped with and how the brushes move. Some brushes are fixed, some spin in different directions to offer a more aggressive scrubbing motion, and others are long rotating brushes similar to those on a vacuum cleaner. If you want a deep clean, you'll want to look for spinning brushes that can loosen dirt effectively as you use the machine. Only need spot cleaning for upholstery and small areas of carpeting? A cleaner with just one or two brushes will likely do the trick. Water Tank Capacity If you're opting for a steam cleaner (the most common type of home carpet and upholstery cleaner), the water tank and its capacity are essential. These cleaning machines typically come with one water tank for clean water and a second tank that fills with dirty water during the cleaning process. Some may also include a tank designed just for the cleaning solution. Consider the size of the water tanks or their capacity. It's easier to clean large areas if you have a larger water tank, as you won't need to stop to refill as frequently. But you will want to keep in mind that a bigger tank can also make a cleaner heavier and a bit more challenging to carry or move around. Hoses The hose is another important feature on any carpet and upholstery cleaner. Some carpet cleaners will include a hose that you can use with attachments and cleaning accessories or a hose that can be used on its own to clean small, hard-to-reach spaces. A hose is also a good idea if you can't move your entire carpet cleaner into specific areas in need of cleaning — it gives you the reach you need. You'll want to consider cleaners with a hose if you're looking at full-size, upright carpet and upholstery cleaners. A hose offers convenience and flexibility. And the longer the hose extends, the better you'll be able to spot clean, or tackle small areas as needed, without moving the entire cleaning machine. Included Attachments Lastly, the attachments that are included with a carpet and upholstery cleaner are a helpful feature. These cleaners can come with attachments like pet hair tools, stain scrubbing brushes, and deep cleaning accessories. And these attachments can provide you with increased versatility as well as more effective cleaning. On upright carpet and upholstery cleaners, attachments can give you the capability to clean furniture, stairs, and tight spots more easily. Portable cleaners can also benefit from having attachments, as they can offer more reach to clean spots and stains of all kinds. Consider what attachments you'd benefit from the most, and know that attachments can add value to a cleaner. Carpet and Upholstery Cleaner Care and Maintenance for Carpet and Upholstery Cleaners Carpet and upholstery cleaners are pretty straightforward to operate, and they're also relatively low maintenance. As long as your machine is running smoothly, your only concerns will need to be a bit of cleaning after each run. You'll want to make sure you empty both the water tank (if there's any water left after cleaning your carpets) and the dirty water tank. It's also a good idea to wash out the dirty water tank to ensure dirt and grime don't build up inside. You can also flush out the machine itself and run a cleaning cycle if that's an option on your carpet cleaner. It'll eliminate any dirt or debris that might've gotten stuck inside during the cleaning process. Cleaning the hose, nozzle, and accessories or attachments is also a good idea after using your carpet and upholstery cleaner. Dirt can collect in these tools, preventing you from getting as thorough of a clean during the next use. Don't forget to follow these care and maintenance tips too. Check both the nozzle and the hose for any lint that might be trapped after each use. Rinse out the hose thoroughly to eliminate any cleaning solution that might cause damage. Never store your carpet and upholstery cleaner with water in the tank to prevent mold and mildew. Use only recommended cleaning solutions with your machine. Dry out your water tanks before putting them back into the machine. Best Carpet and Upholstery Cleaner FAQ: Have questions about finding the best carpet and upholstery cleaner on the market?
